

A Problem Solved

Mom isn't happy with my two brothers and me because she thinks we don't help enough around the house.

My parents, my sister and I are trying to decide where to go this summer for holidays.

In your neighbourhood, a group of students from another school begin to tease you and call you names.

As you get off the school bus, three of your peers take off to one of their houses. They seem to be talking about you and are laughing about you.

Your friend approaches you at recess and it is obvious that he/she is very angry. The friend begins to blame you for having said something to the teacher that got him/her into trouble with the principal.

Alex comes to the unhappy realization that Marsha no longer wants to be the best of friends. The situation comes to a head when their ideas conflict.

Your friend loaned you his/her favourite hockey stick to play in the park. You left it in the park and your friend is mad at you. He/She has threatened to fight with you.

Your mom just got remarried and now you have two stepbrothers who are 14 and 16 years old. They are always roughhousing and wrestling with each other. Now they have started wrestling with you. You don't like it at all. Sometimes they really hurt you.

Jamie wants to play soccer with the other kids but a few of the players don't want him/her in the group.
